A Raymond and Whitcomb special train of eight palace cars, filled with eastern folk who had been taking in the sights of the World's fair, left the Sixtieth-Street depot of the road at Chicago at 8:15, as the first section of the night express, known as No. 5. The train was in charge of Engineer Henry Wooley and Conductor Burt N. Scott, both residents of this place. All weak well until the Battle Creek depot was reached. This was at 3 37. From below to the railroad yards, a dis-tant of a mile and a half, there is a

Most of the coaches had seen many years service and were in poor condition to stand a collision. Every car was packed with eastern people the majority of whom, taking advantage of the low rates were on their way to take in the last

The Pacific express was in charge of Engineer Gil Cranshaw and Conductor John Bird, both of whom had received orders at Lansing to look out for the west-bound train on the double track, After receiving his orders at the Bat-tle Creek station, Engineer Wooley proceeded up the double track, but instead of stopping, as were his instruc-tions until the west-bound express had gone more than an eighth of a mile when the headlight of the Pacific ex-

The state of the treasury excites remark, its gold surplus having fallon to $82,287,89.

Importsave far bohind these of last year, and the accumulation of goods in bond is unusually large, so that customs us well as internal towence ratched decrease heavily. The root of the difficulty is the decrease in consumption of all kinds, and in that respect the week has brought no parcoaptible change. This shrinkings appears less in cotion here than in some other branches of manufacture, and during the week there was glight improvement in the market for some goods. and while the number reported in operation increases, the condition of the markets indicates plainly that few are working at their till capacity. The creduction of wages has been general, and does not tend to increase the consumption of goods. The caution of bootand shoe manufacturers it is believed, has enabled that industry to work into a safe position, but while the stocks of dealers are unquestionably very low, orders received are not enough to fully employ the shops in operation. Some improvement is reported and the decrease in castern shipments compared with last year is but 22 per cent for the week. In silks, mixed textiles and knit goods, the situation has not changed, and the demand is small. In woolens, a slight improvement is perceived in orders given and the number of cutters employed, but about as many mills are closing as resuming work, and the sales of wool at the three chief mills have been 1028,500 pounds, nagainst 8,030,000 last year. It is difficult to admire scenery while standing over an open sewer, and I have been inside many an underground sewer that did not smell as foul as the open cannels of Amsterdam. Nevertheless from a little distance they are very beautiful. Many of the canals have embank ments wide enough to have on each side of the water a row of trees. Thus we have for the center of the thorough are, water people with bargemen and bearing barges and craft of all de-criptions. Then, on either side a scriptions. In Holland, at least, national costumes have not yet been abolished. The Dutch women still dress with their brass headgear and strange and their brass headgear and strange and large jewelry. The fishermen from the Zuyder Zee still wear broeches of wonderful and appalling proportions. Though more than half a yard w de, these wonderful garments only reach just below the knee. Then the head is covered with such a strange cap These dresses add much to the interest and picturesque appect of the streets and picturesque aspect of the streets Some idea of the peculiar aspect of Amsterdam may be gathered from the fact that the numerous canals cut the town into no less than ninety slands, which are connected with each other by about 300 bridges. The ground on which the houses stand is con loam and loose mud, but there is so much water around that this ground offers no solid foundation for building. It is necessary to drive piles down sometimes to a depth of twenty feet to find a foundation sufficiently solic to build upon. But then the wood worms attack these piles, and they gradually give way. Thus many houses are out of perpendicular, a fact which, if it does not contribute to the comfort and safety of the inhabitants, further increases the peculiar and interesting spect of the town.—Philadelphia Tale
